

Grosse Scheidegg to Schwarzwaldalp

Route: Grosse Scheidegg - Pfanni - Schwarzwaldalp

The starting point for this easy and wonderful hike is Grosse Scheidegg. The hiking trail offers everything hikers could wish for: a beautiful route with few challenges, wonderful insights into the flora and fauna, wild watercourses and marvellous views of the nearby and distant mountains.

From the bus stop on Grosse Scheidegg in the direction of Gratschärem, the first thing to do is to warm up. On a marl surface, the trail leads along alpine meadows with intensely blue gentians to this waypoint. From there, the route conditions remain the same in the direction of Scheidegg Oberlägeri. As are the faithful companions: the majestic Wetterhorn and the rugged Engelhorn group. Only on this section streams cross the hiking trail. From the waypoint at 1,950 metres above sea level, the route soon changes. Along Cherrhubel, the path becomes a narrow track. It leads through wonderful meadows with a magnificent splendour of flowers and through small wooded areas. Of course, the blue gentian dominates here too, but you can also marvel at the rare white gentians. The real highlight follows a short time later; it is the rest area before the descent to Pfanni. Here you can enjoy a phenomenal view over Schwarzwaldalp as far as to Titlis (Mountain in Central Switzerland) on the benches in front of a simple wooden shelter with a barbecue area.

Then the steep descent to Pfanni begins. The narrow hiking trail leads over sections of stairs and small wooden walkways. You can see and hear the roaring Pfannibach stream from afar, which will shortly accompany the hikers a little later. Once you reach the waypoint downhill, it's time for your legs to relax again. On a marl surface, the route descends along alpine meadows and mountain huts in long curves towards Schwarzwaldalp. The bus stop is right next to the Chalet-Hotel Schwarzwaldalp, where hungry people can enjoy various local specialities while waiting for the postbus.
